Who is Larry Hogan?

Larry Hogan is not a career politician. He is a small businessman, a concerned citizen, and a lifelong Marylander who loves this state.

Hogan is the Founder, President, and CEO of The Hogan Companies, a leader in economic development for over 25 years, who has been responsible for bringing hundreds of businesses and thousands of jobs to Maryland. He clearly understands how government policy can have an impact on business growth and job creation.

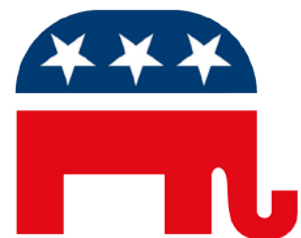

Always a concerned citizen, Hogan also understands state government. He took a leave from his company to serve as a State Cabinet Secretary from 2003 to 2007. During this time, Hogan was involved in the appointment of people to all three branches of government and credited for making the Ehrlich-Steele administration the most bi-partisan, most inclusive, most diverse administration in Maryland history.

A lifelong Marylander who loves this state, Hogan could no longer sit on the sidelines and watch the failed policies of the current administration. In order to provide Marylanders with the opportunity to hold their elected officials accountable, Hogan founded Change Maryland, which has quickly grown into the largest non-partisan grassroots organization in the state. As chairman and founder, Larry Hogan has crisscrossed the state listening to the concerns of Marylanders from all walks of life.

Larry and his wife, Yumi – an artist, teacher, and first-generation Korean-American – reside in Edgewater, MD. They have three daughters and are active in many volunteer civic and charitable organizations.
